Narcissus or Daffodils

One of the most interesting of Spring blooming bulbs.

A flower of antiquity and romance, and its fragrance is most delicate.
The Narcissus has more points of real merit than most other hardy plants, and the possibilities of the family have only recently been developed. They are equally well adapted for the conservatory, window garden, flower garden or border, and its culture is the same as the Hyacinth.

Three or four bulbs may be grown in a single pot, and may be planted any time from October to January. For bedding or borders in the open ground they should be planted in October or November, and should be set from four to five inches deep, the larger varieties from five to six inches apart and the small varieties three to four inches. In the garden they may be planted in any out-of-the-way place, and will continue to thrive and bloom year after year without care or attention and will be among the first to respond to the blandishments of spring.

There are several groups or classes of the Narcissus, as will be seen by referring to the illustration on the other side, and all are attractive and desirable.
